

Supporting our critical infrastructure and key industries during these uncertain times.

It's unparalleled times for us all, Covid-19 has impacted all our lives, causing massive disruption to everyone. Despite this, our hospitals and health care facilities continue to operate, as do many other key industries.

At Delta Mobrey we are doing everything we can to provide the services and support needed to keep these vital facilities functioning. Our factories are still manufacturing, and our Service Engineers are still out on customers' sites to ensure the plant we support is fully operational.

One recent example of this was a visit to The Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital in Stanmore.

While hospitals and the vital services that they perform are in everyone's mind at present, what isn't so obvious is all the support services that are hidden away from the public, without which the hospital couldn't function.

This was a routine visit to service and test the water level controls on the steam boilers, and while some may view this type of visit as low importance, maintaining planned preventative maintenance activities is key to ensuring the plant continues to operate efficiently and safely.

While we do our utmost to support our customers, we continue to put the health & safety of our employees as our highest priority. We take every precaution possible, and follow the guidance provided by the government.

In these uncertain times we remain here to provide the support you need.
